

Cambodia

Since 1992, Helen Keller Intl has worked to improve nutrition, increase food security, and prevent disease. Working closely with Cambodia's Council for Agricultural and Rural Development, the Office of the Council of the Ministers, and the Ministry of Health, we help ensure optimal nutrition for millions by advocating for transparent nutrition policies, supporting mothers with prenatal vitamins and breastfeeding, and delivering essential nutrients like vitamin A to young children. We also empower women with tools and education to grow their own nutritious food, ensuring healthy meals for their families and supplemental income from selling surplus produce at markets.

Challenges

2/3 of pregnant women don't get enough iodine or zinc, micronutrient deficiencies that make it difficult to keep themselves and their unborn child healthy.

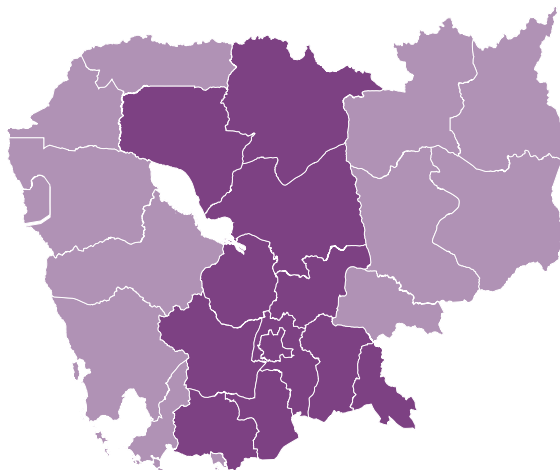

Rising food prices and climate crises make farming more challenging, making it difficult for families to keep nutritious foods on their tables.

22% of Cambodian children under the age of 5 are stunted due to malnutrition.

Our Solutions

Scale up prenatal vitamins that have more nutrients than iron-folic-acid supplements alone, fostering healthier pregnancies and better birth outcomes.

Help communities scale up climate-smart and nutrition-sensitive agriculture practices so families can thrive.

Treat malnourished children with locally-made ready-to-use therapeutic foods to rapidly improve their health and nutrition.

Our Impact

- ✓ Helped more than 1,000 pregnant women transition from iron-folic acid to comprehensive prenatal vitamins.
- ✓ Supported nearly 9,600 families with tools to grow, prepare, and sell nutrient-rich foods.
- ✓ Supported screening of over 15,000 children under five for acute malnutrition and treated 94% identified as being moderately or severely malnourished.
